

Any form of bicycle riding is inherently dangerous. And nowhere is that more true than in downhill riding. There can be trees blocking the entrance of your line and off-camber roots and rocks to contend with, not to mention other trail "hazards." Knowing when to turn and when to brake, at just the right time, is key. Because sometimes, it's all about timing...

RIDER: Carlos Gonzalez (Nema/Leatt/
Cane Creek)
PHOTOGRAPHER: Stephanie Wolf
LOCATION: Simi Valley, California